Reload at Grafton Regional Gallery

Reload: one night stack is a collaborative exhibition between Lyndall Adams and Fiona Fell which goes on display at Grafton Regional Gallery from Wednesday 25 May until Sunday 3 July 2011.

Collaboration is usually a process where the procedures of art-making are shared, interrupted, redesigned and re-negotiated. The exhibition, reload: one night stack, attempts to reload aspects of the work from both contributors, while stacking decisions made by both makers.

Lyndall Adams’ arts-practice speaks to the day to day runnings of the lived body in a state of flux, defined and redefined by changing practices and discourses. Fiona Fell’s work offers up figures in clay that give priority to the internal gesture, contemplating the emotive forces that determine life’s destiny on both a grand and minute scale.

Together they will explore mark making borrowed from each other’s arts-practice to describe the vast distance they suddenly find between themselves while attempting to capture the studio processes entered into.

Lyndall and Fiona will present an artists’ floortalk of the exhibition at 2.30pm on Friday 27 May before attending the opening celebration from 5.30pm that evening. Members of the public are warmly invited to attend the opening with RSVPs for catering requested by Wednesday 25 May.

Check the gallery website for more program details at www.graftongallery.nsw.gov.au or call the gallery on 6642 3177.

The Gallery is located at 158 Fitzroy Street, Grafton and is open 10am - 4pm Tuesday to Sunday. Admission by donation

Release Ends
Further information / images: Contact Jude McBean, Director Grafton Regional Gallery on 02 6642 3177.